SIMON'S PERSONAL BACKGROUND:

Growing up in South Africa as the son of a prominent anti-apartheid activist, Simon Chadwick has firsthand experience of living in a totalitarian society. Under these circumstances, Simon became very familiar with the tactics employed by politicians to suppress opposition, oppress large segments of the population, and engineer society to their own advantage. After progressing through his career and moving to the United States over twenty-eight years ago, he increasingly noticed distinct and unnerving parallels to his early upbringing in the way US politics were unfolding.

PROFESSIONAL BACKGROUND:

Simon's academic background is rooted in politics—having earned a Master's degree in Philosophy, Politics, and Economics from Oxford University—but his career has been in market and social research. For eighteen years, he was a corporate CEO and never earning more than six times the wage of his average staff member. Simon has led two national trade associations, is an entrepreneur, and has been editor in chief of a global trade magazine for the last ten years. He is married to a Louisianan and lives in North Carolina.

For the People: A Citizen's Manifesto to Shaping Our Nation's Future

Available Everywhere
February 4, 2020

For the People communicates what a reinvented and reinvigorated America could look like to achieve national self-actualization.

It details the complexities of current American issues—law and order, homelessness, the environment, the economy, education, health and wellness, and social security—and concrete ways in which we can live and be governed that are in accord with the US Constitution. This manifesto provides a roadmap to digest the practical steps America can take so that its people can live in freedom—from fear, oppression, and exploitation.

For The People examines what it means to belong and how a sense of security leads to well-being for the individual and society alike. This manifesto hopes to invoke discussion and help citizens become informed, active political participants.

Achieving self-actualization
as a nation.
